

Arlene Gordon-Hollingsworth, Ph.D. Bio

Dr. Arlene Gordon-Hollingsworth is a Houston native. She received her Bachelor of Science in Psychology from the University of Houston, Main Campus and Master of Arts in Psychology from Houston Baptist University. Dr. Gordon-Hollingsworth earned her Doctor in Philosophy in Clinical Psychology from Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, LA. Upon completion of her doctoral degree, she completed her postdoctoral fellowship at The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, Division of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry in Baltimore, MD where she worked on numerous NIH treatment studies. This was followed by an International Research Scholar position at Peking University, Department of Psychology in Beijing, P.R. China.

Upon returning to the United States, Dr. Gordon-Hollingsworth joined faculty at Baylor College of Medicine and oversaw the clinical operations of a high-volume behavioral health clinic within a Texas Children's affiliated patient centered medical home. Currently, she is a tenured-track Assistant Professor at Texas Southern University with the Department of Psychology. Her research interests revolve around understanding and utilizing technological advances to enhance the dissemination of evidence-based mental health interventions with the goal of reducing the treatment gap in historically underserved communities.