

A native of Paris, France, Dr. Marylise Caussin received her doctoral degree in Francophone Studies from the University of Louisiana at Lafayette, where she studied Creole and Cajun heritage in Second Language Acquisition, and her Master of Arts in Pedagogy from the Sorbonne University in Paris. She has been a French professor for 20 years, in various institutions such as Rhodes College, The Alliance Française of Chicago, the University of Nice, EFGH, the University of Houston, and Texas Southern University, where she currently is the French program director.